Dawn Jewell is the South Platte Basin Water Resources Supervisor for the City of Aurora. She has worked in Water Resources, focusing on the South Platte River, for the Aurora Water Department since 2007. Her focus has been on building relationships with Aurora's partners in the agricultural, municipal, industrial, environmental, and recreational communities while looking for sustainable options for long-term growth for the City of Aurora, a city of over 370,000 people. Dawn holds a Bachelor of Science in Land Use with an emphasis in environment and resources from Metro State University and is a 2014 alumnus of the Water Education Colorado Water Leaders Program. She serves on the boards for the Brighton and New Brantner Extension Ditch Companies and has been on the DARCA board for 3 years.
